About the Workshop

In our practice, clinicians often encounter clients in great emotional turmoil. Some of them are acutely depressed and suicidal, some are very emotional, some lose touch with reality, and some are agitated and disturbed.

As a practitioner, our goal in the first few interviews is to reach the clients, get the connection, and elicit salient clinical information that can guide us in the risk assessment, immediate and short term management.

Dr. Miao anticipates that by sharing these essential and important clinical skills, participating clinicians or psychologists can be more prepared and empowered in their work, and have better collaboration among relevant disciplines, while students in helping profession shall learn in touch with real-life clinical interview scenarios.
